Placement Service Radically Revised

Arrange New Scheme For Interviews; Company Brochures Available Soon

The Placement Service in a meeting last night with the presidents of the various undergraduate bodies announced their new approach to job interviews, for graduating students.

A.B. Walsh, Assistant Director of the Placement Service in an interview with the Daily outlined the new plan which was instituted last year at the University of Toronto. It is reported to have worked with great success at that university.

Employment interviews with company representatives for all graduating students in Engineering, Chemistry, Geology, Mathematics and Physics, and for all post-graduate students who may be interested, will be concentrated in the period from Tuesday, December 17, through Saturday, December 20.

This is the change which The Placement Service hopes to introduce, for in past years the service has arranged interviews from the beginning of October until the middle of the following term.

SENATE SUPPORTS

The Senate is in full support of this plan, designed to eliminate the inconvenience to students caused by missing lecture hours. Company interviews were daily occurrences and thus a student who had several interviews was forced to forgo important lectures.

More details of the programme will be announced at a later date, but in broad outline it will operate as follows:

Firstly, company literature in the form of booklets explaining the structure and various junctions of each company will be made available in a central location as soon as possible to give all students ample time to study the opportunities offered by each. These booklets should go on display in the scientific libraries in about a week.

Secondly, during the first two weeks of December, students may make individual appointments for interviews with representatives of the companies of their choice.

Plumbers Lose Their Shirts.

The University of Toronto Engineering Faculty has banned windbreakers marked "ENGINEERING". Dean R. R. McLaughlin announced the faculty's decision after several unsuccessful attempts to raise the standard of dressing among the undergraduates. The Dean failed to get endorsement of his campaign from the Engineering Society.

From now on, the "plumbers" will have to wear jackets. According to the students, the move will kill "school spirit".

Lastly, December 17, 18, 19, and 20 will be given over to interviewing.

Interviews for students other than those mentioned and for all summer employment will be available as in past years, throughout the session commencing on October the 20th. The Chemistry, Physics, P.S.C.A., and engineering buildings will be used for the meetings.

At the University of Toronto, both interviewers and students agreed that this was a more useful arrangement than had previously been in effect. The same procedure is being continued at Toronto this year.

Noted Educator, British Historian Lectures Tonight

Tonight in the Physical Science Centre Auditorium, Sir Kenneth Clark, K.C.B., Chairman of The Arts Council of Great Britain and formerly Director of the National Gallery of London will speak on the topic "Turner and the Truth of the Imagination". The lecture is at 8 p.m.

Sir Kenneth Clark has become a world renowned British Art historian. After working for two years in Florence, he was appointed Keeper of the Later Department of Fine Arts at Ashmolean Museum of Oxford. This was in 1931. He fulfilled the capacity of Surveyor of King's Pictures. Sir Kenneth is also widely known as a former Ryerson Lecturer at Yale University.

OTHER FIELDS

Along with a distinguished academic career, he has entered many other fields. Director of the Film Department and a member of the Ministry of Information, Sir Kenneth spent six years on the War Artists Advisory Committee.

He has been recognized by honorable membership in the Swedish Academy, and Commendatore Della Corona d'Italia. Sir Kenneth is a Commander of the Légion d'Honneur and knight of the Lion of Finland. Besides such positions he is a Fellow of the British Academy and of the Royal College of Arts.

Columbia University has bestowed upon him an Honorable Doctorate of Literature. He has also received an honorable L.L.D. from Glasgow and an honorable D.C.L. from Oxford.

Co-eds Give All For Old McGill Every Saturday

As much a part of the autumn football spectacle as the gladiators themselves is that cart-wheeling, leather-lunged three year old institution known as cheerleaderettes.

Four thousand pairs of eyes were fixed on them at one point or another during Saturday's contest, and presumably many more thousand will see them on future occasions. Natural questions arise, "Who are they?" "Why are they?", and "Where are they going?"

THE ANSWERS

The answer to the second question is obvious enough.

To the third query; their only out of town trips are to Queens and Toronto. The girls are not allowed to travel with the team, but go by bus with a chaperone and the Redmen Band. According to one of them, they are treated very well and fiercely protected by the gallant male cheerleaders.

But it is the answer to the first question that is most interesting. Five cheerleaderettes have already been selected. Two others will be selected next Tuesday night when 25 hopefuls will parade before a panel of judges at RVC. Personal attraction, personality, and voice are reportedly the sought-after attributes.

HEAD GIRL

Nancy Rowland is this year's head Cheerleaderette. A third year Arts student hailing from Montreal, she began her cheerleading chores in high school and is, by her own admission, a football fan from way back.

"Acquiring the assurance to go out in front of a crowd of people is one of the values of cheerleading", according to Ann McNally, presently engaged in Fourth year Science.

"I feel more a part of the college", adds Barbara Smith,

Large Crowd Sees Struggle; Marine Battle Ends In Draw

Each Professor Proves His Point; Not One Is Worthy Of Survival

By Leslie Halpert

The Professors' Raft encountered stormy seas last night as four professors argued for the right to survive.

The faculties of Science, Commerce, Engineering, and Arts were represented by Professors Gibbs, Kierans, Joly, and Sleigh respectively.

Professor Gibbs of Science led off the debate. He found it difficult to marshal facts from the overwhelming evidence which he had at his disposal.

The Science representative blamed the School of Commerce for getting them into the mess in the first place, since it had undoubtedly mismanaged the provisions.

STRESS CLOTHING

Professor Gibbs proposed to bring all the benefits of civilization to the savages of the place where the raft would land. The ultimate in civilization was clothing; this he would bring to the natives, whether it was in the form of a fig leaf or a grass skirt. He would also bring them houses. He proposed to teach them to drink (fruit juices, tea, and coffee) and the art of smoking.

Science could also help the poor "benighted savages" to learn philosophy, which started with Darwin's Theory of Evolution.

Professor Gibbs was convinced that none of his three companions would survive the loss of science.

Moderator Dean Frost then introduced "the next unfortunate" Professor Joly of the Faculty of Engineering.

Professor Joly put the question: "Who is going to be the one best equipped to communicate his knowledge to the world?" Obviously this is the most important qualification the survivor must have.

The man best qualified to communicate his knowledge to the world is an engineer because he is concerned with the trans-

Manipulation

Over the summer, the advertising agency responsible for the promotion of Pepsi Cola has come up with a new jingle. It's called the Pepsi Cola Refreshment Song, and it runs something like this:

*"Be sociable — look smart,
Be up to date with Pepsi.
Be young and fresh and debonair.*

Be sociable — drink Pepsi!" The whole being sung with a bright, bouncy enthusiasm just sufficient to conceal the nature of the imperatives contained within.

The item is worth studying for several reasons. Firstly, the switch to the new jingle represents a change in the concept of mass advertising. Where the old commercial concentrated on the product itself (... hits the spot, ten full ounces, that's a lot...), and depended on repetition to get its message instilled in the minds of the listening public. The new jingle tends to emphasize the significance of Pepsi Cola as a marker in the social life of the good consumer. No mention is made in the verse itself of what Pepsi-Cola is.

Secondly, the real intention of the plug is hidden in the sugar-coated directives (Be sociable, etc.): - to align Pepsi Cola with that growing body of criteria which is coming to represent, at least in the advertisers' minds, the ethic of sociability, of togetherness, and of rich, casual, modern hospitality. In short, to make Pepsi the sine qua non of the good consumer's life.

Magazine ads for the soft drinks indicate the same attitude. Here it is the cartoon which forms the centre-piece of the picture. A group of relaxed, smiling, young collegians (in full leisure-class regalia: suede loafers, white flannels, crew neck sweaters, and—a point to note—shiny white teeth) loaf on a patio, the deck of a yacht, or the stone steps of some campus building, all stretching their hands eagerly toward the mystic carton, which seems to radiate more wholesome good fellowship than any sentimental turf-fire in Ireland could ever hope to match. The soft drink is portrayed as the nucleus of the group, and the standard by which the sociability of each individual is judged.

The conclusion usually drawn is that each advertising image (such as the soft drink symbol of togetherness, the upswept fin symbol of power and wealth) is a microcosm, that advertising is evil, that it creates false value standards, and that it causes mistrust between the various elements in society. But this conclusion is always based on the premise that there are people who really believe in the gay, superior world of the slick paper ads. We think the whole creation is a myth. The advertisers, who create the myth, probably enjoy it immensely, but they don't believe in it. Individually, the public doesn't believe in it either, but each individual believes that the public as a whole has faith in it, and it is from this misconception that advertising is seen as dangerous.

Admittedly, some bright young let's toss-it-up-at-the-ceiling-and-see-if-it-sticks-man (or is he, also, a myth?) probably made his career on the basis of that one jingle. Advertising-wise, the song is a great success. But will it sell Pepsi Cola's? Is it sufficient persuasion to buy a product, simply because one sees in an advertisement, or hears on the radio, that that product is the criteria of a certain way of life? In some cases, yes. As a general rule, no.

In short, we don't think that the new Pepsi jingle will influence our judgment either way. If we buy a carton, it will be because we like it, not because we wish to concur in some mythical utopia of debonair togetherness. Similarly, if we don't buy it, it will not be because we wish to assert the taste of the individual against the pressures of a commercial society, but simply because we don't want to drink the stuff.

Health Insurance?

To the Editor:

Yesterday I planned to pay my subscription to The Continental Casualty Company for a year's health insurance coverage of up to as I presumed $350. (as has been the case in previous years).

On carefully reading their pamphlet however I discovered that there was a $100. deductible on Each and Every claim. In my opinion this type of policy is worthless. Medical expenses to-day are such that a broken leg or two or three days in hospital are liable to cost at least $100.

On enquiring at the insurance company's office, I was told that the McGill Health Service would cover the first $125. of expenses incurred through illness or accident. Unfortunately however this is not the case; the McGill Health Service will make up 50% return payments on bills, up to a payment of $125; thus with health service and insurance policy coverage, for any bill over $100, the student has to pay $50.

The SEC negotiated this new policy at an initial cost to the student of $10.50 per year. What, however, of the future costs?

The SEC were offered the SAME coverage, but without the $100 deductible at a cost of $14 for the full years coverage. Thus at present, a sick student can expect a bill for $50.00 and in the summer months, when the Health Service is not in operation, a bill of $100. These are the maximum figures, however, a student shares the expense with the health service up to these amounts, after which the Continental Casualty Company pays up to $350, allocated in various ways.

If the SEC had had a bit more foresight, and with a payment of an additional $350, the student would have full year coverage, up to $350 with not one cent deductible.

Barry Margetts.

A Free Press

To the Editor:

I was amazed to read under the heading of the article on Dulles by Mr. Sadat Kazi in Wednesday's Daily, an expression of editorial opinion, which — to this reader, at least — appeared as an apology for ever having to print the article at all. Since when has it become necessary for the editorial board of the Daily to make an apology for the views of contributors? Contentious material should be the life blood of any university paper worthy of the name, and should need no introduction, nor explanation!

Everyone is entitled to their own opinion, and this should be capable of free expression for all to judge; the Daily, as a sounding board of student thought, should be in the forefront in fostering this meeting of minds. Let disagreements of opinion be threshed out in the columns of the Daily under signed articles or letters, let us not have members of the editorial board using their privileged position to insert disclaimers over articles that may happen to conflict with their own views.

Novice Debate Today

McGill Debating Union Begins For Scholastic Year

Freshmen will be formally introduced to McGill debating today, as the Debating Union begins its novice training program with an introductory debate, "Resolved that practice makes..." at 1:00 pm in the Walter M. Stewart room of the Union.

Defending the resolution will be J. J. Elkin and Les Malcovitch; opposing, will be Seymour Glouberman and Frances Mowatt. All four are graduates of last year's Novice Training program.

The Novice Training program, under the chairmanship of Bernard Schiff, will also comprise a series of four noon-hour lectures. Following the series, practice debates will be held in preparation for the Burlington Trip team trials.

This International Invitational Tournament of the University of Vermont, held in mid-November, enables the Novices to gain experience for possible succeeding trips to Hofstra College and City College of New York, to Rochester, and for speaking in the McGill Winter Carnival Conference.

following the same line of academic pursuit. Both girls are cheerleaderettes.

The remaining veterans are Derry Allen and Nadia Pavlychenko, the latter one of the original female crew who brought McGill up to date with other schools employing lady cheerleaders.

A Red Wing and finalist in last year's Carnival Queen competition, Derry is another Montrealer.

"It is a good excuse to be in certain places where I wouldn't ordinarily be", reflected Nadia Pavlychenko. The trips, she adds, are "fabulous", the girls being well treated by all concerned.

She feels that being a cheerleaderette is a great honour. By attempting to cultivate more of a college spirit within the McGill student body, the girls have a means of contributing to the University.

Raft Goes Down With 4 Aboard

lation of ideas from an intellectual to a practical existence. The other three members of the raft were not concerned with giving intellectual matters physical proportions. He cited the example of an engineer's building falling down; everybody knows about it.

The most important thing is the ability to teach the natives something. An engineer is the best person to find a method of getting useful knowledge across to them.

FOOTBALL FAN

Professor Sleight of Arts proposed to teach the natives to play football. He felt that the liberal education of Arts left no doubt that he was best qualified to survive.

Professor Kierans of the School of Commerce felt that none of the three previous speakers had regarded the savages as human beings; they should have consideration for their spiritual welfare. The commerceman is well qualified to do this.

To prove his point, Professor Kierans cited the case of a young man who wanted to be a minister. He went to the Principal of the university and told him he wanted to take an Arts course in preparation for the ministry. The principal replied: "I would advise you to take Commerce instead of Arts. With Arts you will be a good minister but with the Commerce programme you will be a good bishop."

VOODOO HEAVEN

The commerceman proposed to organize witch doctors and establish a divinity among them.

Professor Kierans felt that one could get an engineering degree "without taking anything". Since a commerce student has to take a compulsory continuation in one of the humanities, he was obviously the one best equipped to look after the intellectual life of the savages.

He also proposed to establish a monetary system among the natives, although this might entail printing his own money.

After the four men had spoken and questions from the audience had been raised, Dean Frost announced that the helpless four had argued so long that "the raft has sunk under them." Unfortunately none reached the island and the natives must now look elsewhere for intellectual advancement.

Ensemble Presents

by Leonard Rosmarin

The McGill Chamber Ensemble has in recent years become a vital force in Montreal's cultural and musical life. Thus it is not at all surprising that their first concert, presented in cooperation with the Montreal Jewish Music Council, should be such a unique experience.

Contrary to popular belief, the McGill Chamber Ensemble is not made up of conservatory students, but consists of hand-picked, highly professional musicians — the best in their field. And the performance was professional indeed. Under the masterful direction of their renowned leader, Mr. Alexander Brott, they produced tones of such vibrant warmth, and showed such deep understanding of the composers' intentions as it has not always been our privilege to hear.

This year being Israel's tenth anniversary, the programme was devoted entirely to works by composers of Jewish origin. The selections themselves were a revelation. Such superb music as we heard last night should certainly not be left to collect dust in obscurity. They all have a special, yet undefinable quality which eloquently expresses the philosophy and spirit of the Hebrew race.

The concert opened with a work by the Israel composer Oedoen Partos entitled Yiskor (In Memoriam). In sombre, melancholy, yet profoundly moving strains, the work expressed all the solemnity attached to this important Hebrew ritual. Stephen Kondaks, who played the violin solo, drew from his strings music of uncommon purity.

OUTSTANDING PIECE

"Verklaerte Nacht" by Schoenberg, which followed immediately, was the pièce de résistance of this performance. With prodigious orchestration powers which have never been surpassed, the composer seemed to evoke a restless, tormented soul seeking solace in the velvety, infinitely beautiful night which wraps him in its mantle of solace. The opening, with its hushed strings and gradually increasing agitation was a tremendous experience.

After a short intermission, we were treated to a brand new work by Mr. Brott himself, called "The vision of the Dry Bones", taken from Ezekiel, with Cantor Solomon Gisser as soloist. Here Mr. Brott admirably recreated the stark simplicity and religious fervor of this great Biblical passage. Mr. Gisser (in excellent voice) sang forcefully and with deep feeling.

As the final selection on last night's programme, the group performed Bloch's immensely exciting Concerto Grosso for string orchestra. You need only hear five minutes of this wonderful score to realize that the imprint of genius has been left on it; for here was melting lyricism

Inters Lose Thrilling Opener To Rosemount

by Dave Solway

The McGill Indians came up with a spirited and inspired effort in last night's Intermediate football tilt at Rosemont's Morgan Park, but could not pull the game out of the fire, or chilly evening winds, as it were. The contest could be likened to one of Copp's and Robbers, as coach Davy Copp's McGillians outplayed and outgained their rivals, the Rosemount Bombers, yet were robbed of a victory by bad breaks.

Fumbles were frequent occurrences throughout the game. The first quarter had barely got under way when the Indians lost the ball as a direct result of a miscue in the backfield, only to recover it one play later. And in this manner the battle progressed. All told there were 13 fumbles, 6 of which were made by the Indians.

The Warparty experienced a considerable amount of difficulty getting untracked, as their ball carriers were often caught at the line of scrimmage.

In the second quarter, the Bombers rolled into high gear and kicked a single for the lone point of the half.

Rosemount struck again, this time early in the third frame. Larry Fairholm, the Bombers' most effective runner, barrelled over from the McGill five yard line for the major. The convert attempt was unsuccessful and the count remained 7-0 in favor of Rosemount throughout the balance of the game.

STRONG DEFENCE

McGill displayed a stout and vicious defence that continued to make a shambles of the opposing forward wall, and create havoc in the Bomber backfield, containing the enemy to only 65 yards along the ground; however, on offence, the warparty was unable to do much better.

The Indians could put together only one sustained drivebate in the fourth quarter, but a fumble and an interception stalled the advance.

Quarterback Bill Diachin of McGill had 4 of his passes intercepted. The Indians completed 7 of 13 passes for 115 yards. The Bombers made good 4 of 7 for a total of 70 yards. Each team knocked out 10 first downs, the majority of which came via the ground.

INTER STARS

Dan Uniat played a whale of a game as offensive end, pulling down 4 passes for 55 yards. He was a constant threat, piercing the bomber pass defense almost at will. Perhaps a new Hal Patterson is in the making. Fullback Bill Perkins and wingback Al Mackenzie also played outstanding games.

COMPULSORY

Every able bodied member of this university is compelled to attend what will be the best football game of the season. Bring no money; but do bring a strong voice, all the red and white clothing available, and, if necessary, liquid refreshment. The Toronto Blues are the team that the Redmen will do their best to wallop.

CRICKET

It is hoped to send a Cricket team to Toronto to play the University of Toronto on Saturday, October 11th. All those interested in participating in preliminary trials are requested to attend a meeting in the Union Lounge at 1 pm on Thursday.

Cheers For Saturday

Know this one--

M-C-G-I-L-L
What's the matter with Old McGill?
She's all right, oh yes, you bet,
McGill, McGill, McGill;
Rah, Rah, Rah;
Rah, Rah, Rah;
Rah, Rah, Rah;
McGill!

Ignore this one -

Toronto! Toronto! Toronto
Varsitee!
We'll shoot and fight for the Blue and White and the honor of U. of T.
Ripperty! Rapperty!
Ripperty! Rapperty! Ree!
Toronto! Toronto! Toronto
Varsitee!

McGill supporters will change the second line of the Toronto cheer to read: We'll shout and fight for the Red and White and the heck with the U. of T.)
